Articles for consideration should be sent as a Word attachment to the editors, Dr Bella Adams and David Forster, info@americansc.org.uk.

Before submitting the article for consideration, authors should send a 50-word abstract of the article to the editors. Authors should also provide details of their postal address and educational affiliation.

Authors should ensure that they have taken the following guidelines into account when submitting an article:

Copyright

In order to ensure the widest dissemination and protection of material published, we normally ask authors to share the rights of copyright in the articles they contribute. We also ask authors to secure the necessary written permission from the appropriate copyright owner or authorities for the reproduction in the article of any text, illustration or other material.

Style

Our readership is wide and includes AS/A2 level, undergraduate and postgraduate students, teachers, academics and general readers. For this reason, we ask authors to ensure that the style of their article is accessible.

Content

We invite submissions on any aspect of American culture, including art, education, film, history, literature, the media, politics, religion and society.

Word Count

There is no word limit, although articles in American Studies Today are usually 2,500 to 3,000 words and tend not to exceed 5000 words. Articles that exceed 5000 words are typically published in the online version of our journal, American Studies Today Online.

Referencing

Use either Harvard or the MLA referencing system. Authors should ensure that their referencing system is consistent.

Editing and Publication

If your article is accepted, we will prepare and publish it. We reserve the right to make editorial changes as necessary to make the article suitable for publication. We also reserve the right to decide whether the article appears in print or in the online version of our journal. American Studies Today is published annually in September. All contributors will be sent a print copy of American Studies Today.
